

other people closely related to blood get together you produce people with problems, that if there are recessive genes, they tend to link up in those kind of biological encounters, that is what we call it now. When Gary Hart and...what's that lady, Dawn Rice get together, Donna Rice get together it is an encounter; when the right reverend doctor James Bakker and Ms. Hall get together they have an encounter. And there was another one that I was trying to...oh, no, this one didn't have an encounter, she was accused of having smuggled documents out of a place in her bra. This is the kind of conversation and action that happens in America, I read that in the newspaper. That is the level at which serious discussion is carried on in this country and, again, I'm from the ghettos of North Omaha and I'm looking at all of this stuff and these are important people that are involved, not ghetto people, not the poor white people from Appalachia who they say run around in bare feet, or the clay eaters from Georgia, no, these are people running for president, sitting at the top of PTL and the Legislature of Nebraska making laws, these are the ones doing that. Then I have got to start jogging my mind and saying when I was in school and they're ridiculing people of my complexion as being inferior and savage, we don't even believe in that. And yet, here it is all being played out for us every day on television, every evening on television and if you watch Ed Copple tonight or the evening news, which you won't get to because we are engaged in deep discussion here of law making activities, you will see some of that this evening, you will see some of it tomorrow, and you will see more and more of it. So, this amendment that I am offering should not cause anybody any discomfort. And why, if we are trying to bring these CEOs in here, should we be concerned about the sexual preference? We don't want to discriminate, do we? After all, business men are not philanthropists, they are not saints, their aim is to make profit and that is all that we are interested in. How much money are they going to make? How many jobs are they going to produce? And we don't care what the jobs are, we don't care how demoralizing the atmosphere is in the corporation. We don't care if the CEO sees a young lady and he likes her so he pinches her on the rear end. We don't care about that. He is making profit, a profit is America's business. Tell her, if you want to rise in this company, you have got to show me certain favors. We don't care about all of that. In America, profit is what counts and those kind of people are allowed those kind of liberties because they own the people who work for them and that is why Mike Harper can call in 500 shaking, quaking employees and tell them, you are going to lose your job. It is over,
